First Person Point of View

Told from one person’s view. Allows the reader to better understand that character. This does NOT allow the reader to see things from everyone’s point of view.

Uses I, me, myself.
Second Person Point of View

Instructions are given to you, the reader. Technical writing is written in second person.

Uses the word you.
Third Person Limited Point of View

Picks one character and follows that character closely. Knows that character’s feelings and a limited amount of other characters’ feelings.

Uses words such as he, she, they.
Third Person Omniscient Point of View

Allows a reader to know the thoughts and feelings of multiple characters. Moves from character to character to explain their behavior and ideas.

Uses words like he, she, they.
Author’s Purpose is what???

To persuade  Pursuasive Text
To entertain  Narrative Text
To teach      Technical Text
To inform     Expository Text